3:15 Venezuela: Revolution From the Inside Out

Clifton Ross' 2008 film explores the history and projects of the Bolivarian Revolution through interviews with a range of its participants, from academics to farm workers and those living in the margins of Caracas, all of whom comprise the fabric of "Socialism of the 21st Century."

4:50 The Right to Live in Peace

In November 2008 an international delegation, including Bay

Area activists and trip leader Lisa Sullivan of SOA Watch, visited Chile to encourage community representatives and elected officials to stop sending troops to the School of the Americas.

5:30 Cocalero

Aymara Indian coca leaf grower Evo Morales travels through the Andes and Amazon leading an historic bid to become Bolivia's first indigenous president. This 2006 film captures some intimate moments and his triumphant rise to power.

7:15 Cuba and Fidel

Bay Area filmmaker Saul Landau's 1974 documentary provides an intimate glimpse into the personal and public life of Fidel Castro.

The War on Democracy

John Pilger's 2007 film contains exclusive interviews with US government officials who ran the CIA's war on Latin America in the 80s. What's happened in Latin America is a metaphor for how the rest of the world is being "ordered." It is hopeful, for it sees the world through the dreams and extraordinary actions of ordinary people.
